

The Urban Brain

A Denver Colorado Blog! This blog focuses on Denver, its people, culture, activities, sense of place and all that makes it work--historic preservation, urban design, transportation, asset-based community development, arts & cultural development, commercial district revitalization, tourism & our mountain locations, restaurants, events, and quality of life advocacy--along with doses of civic responsibility and getting people into a dialogue about our city and state.

La Sandia Opens!

Richard Sandoval opens his newest restaurant with the Grand Opening of La Sandia at Northfield, Stapleton. Born in Mexico city, Mexico, Richard Sandoval grew up with Mexican Culture and food. He worked in his father's well regarded Madieras and Villa Fiore restaurants, and then continued to California where Sandoval enrolled at the Culinary Institute of America. He was awarded the National Toque d'Oro, Chef of the year after returning to his father's restaurant.

Richard then hit New York where he conquered the critics with a modern French menu at Savann and Savann Est. Following more success in New York and San Francisco he brought his talents to our city of Denver with Tamayo and then in 2004 with Zengo. Now, he starts with his newest Denver restaurant La Sandia with this grand opening on Wednesday, October 25th, 2006.
